"New Market Framework - a Recruitment and Compensation Perspective"

Capital Markets activity in Brazil suffered a steep slump in the last quarter of 2008 and first quarter of 2009. In April, after the "sudden go" seen by world wide stock markets, Brazil's economy appears to be recovering at a faster pace than the rest of the world. However, markets recruitment rate and compensation level still seem to follow global patterns, which have become more sober and might never go back to 2006 and 2007's euphoria.

Headcounts have been hammered by Mergers - such as Itaú/Unibanco, Bank of America/Merrill Lynch, and others. Global names are fewer, and make more conservative plans as there isn't as much money on the table to be spent. On the other hand, Emerging Markets are gaining new importance, and places like Brazil have turned into huge bets for the future.

Question is: "How should we prepare ourselves for this new reality?"
